From the President,

Welcome to Albuquerque! We have an exciting week ahead of us. With an overwhelming number of submissions to participate in sessions on Connecting to Conservation: Outreach and Advocacy, we have revised our format this year to include a greater number of concurrent sessions. We also took this opportunity to replace our general, all-attendee sessions with keynote presentations. These three leaders—Tyler Green, Samuel Jones, and Anne-Imelda Radice—will provide intriguing perspectives on raising public appreciation of the preservation of cultural material.

On Wednesday, our Opening Reception takes place at the Albuquerque Museum of Art and History. Enjoy its wonderful indoor and outdoor spaces with your friends and colleagues. I look forward to seeing you there.

Be sure to take time to visit the Exhibit Hall, with over 50 vendors providing products and services you use every day, and talk with as many vendors as possible. Best of all, on Thursday, a complimentary lunch is being offered in the Exhibit Hall. And, immediately following the free lunch, help us celebrate AIC’s 40th Anniversary! Join us on Thursday at 1:00 p.m. for cake and a celebration of AIC and its members. We have much to be proud of.

Yet, we always need to be looking ahead, so be sure to come to Friday’s session on “What’s Next” for AIC. What have you learned during the week that you can implement in the coming year—and how can AIC help? Let’s talk!

—Meg Loew Craft, President

Connecting to Conservation: Outreach and Advocacy

MAY 8–11, 2012
Albuquerque, New Mexico

The theme of this annual meeting will be outreach and advocacy in conservation, an exploration of how conservation connects with allied professionals, the press, our clients, and the general public. This meeting will feature a General Session format very different than in years past. For the 40th Annual Meeting, in addition to one session where all attendees gather to hear a selection of presenters, there will be other breakout sessions where a wide array of topics pertaining to the overall theme will be addressed in topical conversations presented in smaller group settings rather than a large lecture format.

Albuquerque, located in northern New Mexico west of the Sandia Mountains and on the Rio Grande river, is home to almost 900,000 people, ranks as the 32nd largest city, and is the sixth fastest-growing city in America. Settled by the Spanish in 1706, Albuquerque is generally believed to have been named by the provincial governor Don Francisco Cuervo y Valdes in honor of Don Francisco Fernández de la Cueva, viceroy of New Spain from 1653 to 1660. One of de la Cueva’s aristocratic titles was Duke of Alburquerque, referring to the Spanish town of Alburquerque. Founded as a farming community and strategically located military outpost along El Camino Real, Albuquerque is home to the University of New Mexico (UNM), Kirtland Air Force Base, Sandia National Laboratories, Lovelace Respiratory Research Institute, and Petroglyph National Monument. Albuquerque also contains a variety of museums, galleries, shops, and other points of interest. Some of these include the Albuquerque Biological Park, Museum of Natural History and Science, and Old Town Albuquerque. The majority of locally owned boutiques and fine dining establishments are scattered throughout Downtown, Old Town, and Uptown.

Tyler Green

Keynote for Articulating Value Session, Wednesday, May 9

Tyler Green, an influential arts journalist, will speak on the current state of arts journalism today and his perspectives on what makes conservation projects worthy of public attention in the news. Tyler Green is based in Washington, DC where he edits and writes “Modern Art Notes” (MAN) and is the U.S. columnist for Modern Painters magazine. Green’s newest venture is The Modern Art Notes podcast, a weekly program that he independently produces and hosts. It is distributed each Thursday via MAN, iTunes, RSS feed and on MANPodcast.com. The Washington Post has named Tyler Green one of Washington’s 14 “young and influential” cultural figures. Away from MAN, Green has written for Fortune, Conde Nast Portfolio, Smithsonian, Washingtonian, The New York Observer, LA Weekly, Black Book magazines and has contributed op-eds to newspapers such as the Los Angeles Times, The Boston Globe, The Philadelphia Inquirer and to The Wall Street Journal’s arts op-ed column, “In the Fray.”

Why and How Museums and Conservators Should Nudge Conservation Forward,

At a time when journalism is struggling and when journalism about art is increasingly falling away, how can conservators present stories about art and about their practice to the public? Green will discuss why museums should reconsider the role conservators play in the museum—and how conservators can present their practice to the public at-large both independently and in conjunction with art museums.

Samuel Jones

Opening Keynote, Wednesday, May 9

Samuel Jones, an associate of Demos, an independent British think tank, will focus his talk on the place of culture in society. Jones primary interests include the arts, culture, and creativity. Jones has worked in the commercial fields of branding and consumers as well as with media organizations such as the BBC to research audiences for the arts. He is also an accomplished art historian who has studied the role of culture in international and intercultural dialogue and the importance of creativity and visual development in education. In 2008, he co-authored It’s A Material World: Caring for the Public Realm, which emphasized the importance of caring for cultural material. His other work includes co-authoring Cultural Diplomacy and Knowledge and Inspiration and contributions to the Demos collection Production Values. He also sits on the UK Executive Board of the International Council of Museums (ICOM). He has a degree in history from Cambridge and an MA in the history of art from the Courtauld Institute of Art.

It’s a Material World

Outreach and advocacy are familiar words to any organisation seeking public support and funding. However, they are about more than simply making a case: thinking about just what the conservation sector provides and how it can change the profession and reinvigorate it as an important part of the public realm. This speech is based on It’s a Material World, which Samuel Jones published with John Holden in 2008. It will examine conservation in wider social and political contexts. Conservators deal on a daily basis with ideas and concepts that are at the very heart of the public realm, caring for the values around which society is built. Telling this story is not just a vital part of outreach and advocacy, but can also help policy-makers and society meet some of the most significant challenges that we, collectively, face.

Dr. Anne-Imelda Radice

Thursday Keynote, May 10

Dr. Anne-Imelda Radice will speak on the subject of advocacy, about impacting public policy, and injecting importance for caring of cultural heritage into the lives of the public. Prior to joining the Dilenschneider Group, Radice was director of the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) from 2006 to 2010. Previously acting assistant chairman for programs at the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), she served as chief of staff to the secretary of the United States Department of Education. In the early 1990s, she was acting National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) chairman and senior deputy chairman. From 1989 to 1991, Radice was chief of the Creative Arts Division of the United States Information Agency and also served as the first director of the National Museum of Women in the Arts (1983–1989). In 2008 Radice was awarded the AIC Forbes Medal as recognition of her contributions to the field of conservation.

In Praise of Conservators and Conservation

Once again, we go back to the drawing board to think of ways to affect public policy and convince people of the importance of caring for their own heritages. We need to regroup and become part of the discussion in every discipline. This is more than a call to action but the launch of another, invigorated phase of conservation/preservation/protection. Let us work this out together. I have a few ideas.

10:30 AM – NOON
(Ballrooms A-B-C, Upper Level, West Complex)

While all of us who work in cultural heritage management understand the intrinsic value of heritage resources, we are often challenged to articulate this value in economic terms, and to audiences that might not share our point of view. This session will explore how cultural heritage and the conservation thereof, is valued and articulated by conservators and others under normal circumstances and in the face of disaster.

This theme will be explored through four presentations: managing collections as non-renewable resources from an economic perspective, determining economic value of heritage resources impacted by natural disasters, strengthening heritage values communication and outreach, and finally, presenting an academic program that embraces and prepares students for the complexity of communicating heritage values to politicians and other stakeholders. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

CSCP Luncheon Session
NOON – 2:00 PM
(La Cienega, Upper Level, East Complex)

Linking Environmental and Heritage Conservation: Presentations, Discussions, and Tips
Hosted by the Committee for Sustainable Conservation Practice
Ticket Required: $8, includes buffet lunch

This session will include two speakers in environmental conservation and four tips on art and heritage conservation. The speakers will give an overview of current essential issues in environmental conservation and how they relate to our conservation field. They will also address practical issues concerning materials and solvent use, and will discuss how green chemistry applies to our work. The session will also include tips by four conservators who will present on how they have incorporated sustainable practices into their work by retrofitting exhibition cases and rehousing collections, reducing energy costs within collections environments and re-considering water treatment. We have also put ample time aside for an engaged, educational discussion session and will display posters with sustainable benchmarks and our 2011 survey results. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Case Studies II: Disaster Outreach
2:00 PM – 3:30 PM
(Picuris,Sandia, Santa Ana, Lower Level, West Complex)

This session will address innovative international initiatives in South America, the Middle East, and Europe that provide conservation training, preservation resources, and public education to underserved areas of the globe. Specific projects will be shared focusing on traveling exhibitions, art, conservation and society, photograph collections and preservation training across the Middle East; and projects by Heritage Without Borders, designed to provide training and education on-site and in more traditional classroom settings. Issues associated with funding, sustainability, language, art as resource, cultural, economic and social differences, volunteerism, and preservation versus access, as well as challenges in training and education will all be discussed. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Contributors: Alexandra Ellem, HDT Williamson Painting Conservation Fellow, Conservation Department, National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne; Lori Foley, Vice President for Emergency Programs, Heritage Preservation; Kathleen Maher, Executive Director/Curator, The Barnum Museum; and Susan Mathiesen, President, S.A.M. Fundraising Solutions

Note: Case Studies I & Case Studies III will be presented on Thursday afternoon.

Outreach to Allies Session
2:00 PM – 5:30 PM
(Galisteo/Aztec, Ground Level, East Complex)

Conservators interact with allied professionals tasked with preservation and collections care in various ways. Presentations in this double-session are grouped into 3 overall themes:

Tools & Tactics—In this portion of the session we will discuss the various ways conservators and their allies have worked together to increase advocacy for collections care. Topics include how conservators in private practice interface with museum staff to raise funds, enhance awareness and promote collections care; the benefits and efficacy of grant programs like IMLS’s Connecting to Collections and Conservation Assessment Programs, which are designed to provide funding and access to preservation resources; and how we can work with our allies to develop, promote and implement standards and best practices that advance collection care.

Conservation, Science & Research—This portion of the session will examine the communication challenges between conservation and the museum and academic research communities. By examining the issues that sometimes limit the flow of information between conservators and conservation scientists and issues in working with academic partners, we can learn how to better develop capacity and communicate our priorities.

Networks—The challenges facing us in preserving our cultural heritage are many and varied, making it essential that we work effectively with our colleagues and communicate clearly with different audiences. No individual or agency can do this alone. The presentations in this session will discuss networks created to reach out, advocate and implement conservation and preservation priorities. Time has been allotted for an interactive component with attendees providing feedback for how AIC’s newly formed Collections Care Network can function effectively in a challenging work and financial environment. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Public Art Outreach Session
8:30 AM – NOON
(Ruidoso/Pecos, Upper Level, East Complex)

Public art is uniquely well-suited to provide opportunities for public awareness of conservation and public involvement. More and more, conservators take on the role of communicating the importance of cultural heritage, and engaging the public through diverse and innovative projects that go beyond the scope of traditional conservation treatment. The expanding range of social media, crowdsourcing, and web-based applications create whole new avenues for documenting and interpreting cultural heritage for the general public.

Projects explore ways of using new media and web-based applications to reach as wide an audience as possible. With the rapid advances in communication technology, the potential for different forms of media to be effectively used by the conservation community is great, and has only just begun to be explored. Attendees are invited to share other examples of public art outreach using innovative communication tools during the discussion and roundtable portion of the session. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Communicating Conservation Session (Galisteo/Aztec, Ground Level, East Complex)
Join conservators experienced in developing content for print, social media, and television for a conversation exploring what makes for effective, engaging, appropriate content in various arenas. We will consider what web analytics and other metrics can tell us about who is consuming our content and how participation in an organization’s blog or social media efforts affects the manner in which conservators are viewed within institutions and by the world at large.
Panelists will present statements to help frame our discussion before it is opened up to the floor. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Contributors: Beth Doyle, Head Of Conservation Services Department, Duke University Libraries; Mark Farmer, Web Design Manager, Royal Ontario Museum, Ontario; Rosa Lowinger, Principal and Chief Conservator, Rosa Lowinger & Associates; Heidi Sobol, Senior Conservator, and Melissa Tedone, Conservator, Preservation Department, Iowa State University

Conservation & Education I Session (Picuris/Sandia/Santa Ana, Lower Level, West Complex)
Art Conservation’s combination of science and art is a natural fit with the interdisciplinary focus of today’s K-12 educators. Conservation topics provide ample opportunities to engage and appeal to student learners of all levels and interests, and teaching conservation fundamentals to students of all ages provides much-needed practical science education while promoting the value of preserving our cultural history. AIC’s K-12 Education Working Group will present a panel of professionals, including conservators, museum educators, and classroom teachers, who are engaged in exciting projects designed to reach these new audiences. Join us to learn about ways you can collaborate with your local museums and schools, then brainstorm with your colleagues to develop new ideas for imparting our knowledge and inspiring the next generation. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Conservation & Education II Session (Taos/Cochiti, Lower Level, West Complex)
This session will address teaching to fine art, art history and museum studies undergraduate and graduate students at several American universities and colleges including Prin斯顿, Tufts, Colby, and Rhode Island School of Design. The interdisciplinary nature of the college and university structure has led to the natural development of practical and germane instruction focusing on principles of art conservation that effectively merge the study of liberal arts, fine arts and scientific disciplines to a broader pre-professional audience. These opportunities unite interdisciplinary fields to develop new networks composed of untapped professional colleagues within allied professions that can potentially move our field significantly forward. A wrap-up discussion period will evaluate the goals and objectives of past and present teaching by members in our field to non-conservators. Subsequent discussion will delve into how these collaborations could be improved in the future to move the field of art conservation into a broader context.

Possible Discussion Points—What are the most important concepts to teach non-conservation professionals employed in a museum setting? What do conservators feel is the most important material to teach future museum professionals (non-conservators) about our profession? Which museum professionals do we need to reach and why? What is the best way in which to convey these ideas? What would we consider the essential body of knowledge for non-conservator museum professionals? (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Ulrich, Director, Conservation Division, ARG Conservation Services, San Francisco; Nina Roth-Wells, Conservator in Private Practice, and Instructor, Colby College

Conservation Conversations: Audience, Fundraising, Institutional Support, and Career Paths Session (Mesilla, Upper Level, East Complex)
Sara Kay strategizes about message and image; Carmen Li turns to social media to fundraise for preservation; Scott Carriere and colleagues discuss career paths; and the Atingham Re-discovered project quantifies the positive feedback effect of conservation in the public eye. Using a talkshow format that incorporates case studies, talks, and interviews, this session will provoke discussions of audience, fundraising, outreach successes and failures, and draw upon compelling stories from conservators whose career paths have diverged from hands-on treatment. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Contributors: Scott Carriere, Curator of Museum Services, Alaska State Museum; Julie Heath, Museum Market Manager, Tru Vue, Inc.; Sarah Kay, Curator, and Catriona Hughes, Conservator, UK; Carmen Li, Preventive Conservation Manager, University of Alberta Museums, Edmonton; Susan Mathisen, President, S.A.M. Fundraising Solutions; Wynne Phelan, Conservation Director, Museum of Fine Arts, Houston; Sari Urchuck, Objects Conservator, Acanthus Conservation; and Robin Zella, Director, House of Art Museum

Case Studies I: Public Outreach in the Developing World Session (San Miguel, Upper Level, East Complex)
Three case studies highlight the challenges and opportunities for furthering conservation goals after a major disaster strikes. The outreach and advocacy following the deadly 2009 bushfires in Australia, the incorporation of recovery strategies in museum design following a destructive F1 tornado in 2010, and the 2011 AIC-CERT response to severe flooding in North Dakota illustrate three different approaches to disaster recovery. This session will explore assumptions about recovery, what happens when these assumptions prove wrong, and lessons learned and triumphs achieved under trying circumstances. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Case Studies III: Outreach Tools (Acoma/Zuni/Tesque, Lower Level, West)
This Session describes specific projects which have connected the public with conservation under a variety of different circumstances, including preservation fairs, social media, museum displays, and historic sites.
Anderson will discuss a recurring Preservation Fair that encourages visitors to bring an object or question to be discussed by preservation professionals from a variety of institutions. Haskins will delve into the future of conservation outreach and advocacy through social media. Jewell et al. will show how one institution can reach out to their traditional audience by giving visitors the opportunity to talk to conservators as they work, as well as having conservators curate an exhibit, collaborating with their professional colleagues to reach out to the audience in new ways. Wellman and Young discuss how a professional association performs their mission of public education with Angels’ Projects and an Outreach Booth at local events. Shockey et al. will discuss how they reached out to different types of audiences that see conservation at work in the Lunder Center’s “visible lab.” (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Exhibiting Ourselves: Presenting Conservation Session
9:30 AM – NOON
(San Miguel, Upper Level, East Complex)

In this interactive session, the audience and presenters will explore issues related to conservation outreach through exhibitions. Presentations will examine: research on methodologies for communicating preservation in exhibitions, the benefits and challenges of working in a visible conservation lab, case studies of exhibitions which incorporate technical information, an exhibition that highlights preservation principles outside of a museum, and conservation and preservation information as part of the narrative in a new museum. Following the presentations, audience break-out groups will be tasked with exploring and brainstorming solutions to issues related to the session theme. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Contributors: Cynthia Albertson, Research Fellow, and Anny Aviram, Conservator, The Museum of Modern Art; Sanchita Balachandran, Curator/Conservator, Johns Hopkins Archaeological Museum; Suzanne Davis, Curator of Conservation, Kelsey Museum of Archaeology; Tom Learner, Senior Scientist, Getty Conservation Institute; Christopher McAulee, Senior Conservator, Church History Department, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints; Sophia Papida, Conservator of Archaeological Finds, Conservation Department, 1st Ephorate of Prehistoric and Classical Antiquities, Athens; Irene Peters, Interim Head of Conservation, Conservation Department, Musical Instrument Museum; Emma Richardson, Post Doctoral Fellow, Science Department, Getty Conservation Institute; Rachel Rivenc, Research Lab Associate, Getty Conservation Institute; and Emily Williams, Conservator of Archaeological Materials, The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation

Luncheon: Working With Artists Session
NOON – 2:00 PM
(Doña Ana, Ground Level, East Complex)

The practice of conservation has become an increasingly collaborative process for conservators of contemporary art and traditional cultural collections. The imperative to preserve impermanent and intangible, as well as physical, aspects of artworks and cultural objects has led to an interdisciplinary, fluid and open approach. Of particular importance has been the engagement of contemporary and/or traditional artists in the process of examination, documentation, conservation research and decision-making, treatment and exhibit installation. This work has expanded definitions of conservation and deconstructed traditional professional boundaries between various museum professionals and other kinds of experts.

In this interactive session, presentations by three conservators will address practical and theoretical aspects of collaborative work in the preservation of variable contemporary art and traditional cultural collections. The role and goals of the conservator in this work, along with the critical role of documentation in this process will be explored. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

Communicating in the Haiti Recovery Project Session
2:30 PM – 3:30 PM (Picuris/Sandia/Santa Ana, Lower Level, West Complex)
Presentation by each panelist followed by Q&A

Communicating the Haiti Recovery Project: Outreach and Reportage
This panel will consist of presentations and a discussion about the different ways in which the Smithsonian Institution Haiti Cultural Recovery Center project was reported and communicated—both to the conservation field and the general public. The panel will consist of individuals who worked on the project in different capacities and wrote about it and/or reported it through conferences, seminars, blogging, and other reportage. Each panelist will present the ways in which they reported and/or communicated about the project. In particular, we will aim to discuss the ways in which information about the project was tailored to a specific audience and why that is necessary to properly disseminating the information on a project. We will touch upon the roles of conservators as communicators in sensitive, cross-cultural environments, and the ways in which lack of information control can be problematic. Among the places where this project was reported or communicated include print (The New York Times, Haitian newspapers), television (Reuters, CNN, Smithsonian Network), blogs and internet (c-moment, Smithsonian, WNYC.com, Episcopal News Service, and other blogs), Facebook posts, the AIC CERT reports, conference sessions, basic treatment reports, and the book Saving Haiti’s Heritage: Cultural Recovery after the Earthquake, by Richard Kurin of the Smithsonian Institution. Topics will include how conservation information is disseminated and portrayed in diverse media and how we as conservators who were involved with this project helped to disseminate particular aspects of the project and dealt with how the information was and continues to be disseminated. (For full text see the Abstract Book.)

The Great Debate Session
2:30 PM – 3:30 PM (Galisteo/Aztec, Ground Level, East Complex)
Moderator: Richard McCoy, Conservator of Objects & Variable Art, Indianapolis Museum of Art

Debate Topics
• Having conservators on view in the gallery perpetuates too narrow a perception of the conservation profession.
• Publishing accurate “how-to-guides” for conservation and restoration practices online is the best way for us to care for cultural heritage.

Come listen to your colleagues debate the most important conservation issues of the day in the first ever Great Debate at AIC! Two Oxford-Style Debate sessions, each lasting 30 minutes and each with their own debate topic, will pair conservators on stage to examine challenging topics. The goal of the Great Debate is to create a new forum that encourages meaningful discussions and give conservators the opportunity to demonstrate their capacity to address challenging issues directly, openly, and in a fresh format.

Each debate session will consist of initial presentations from each team lasting a total of five minutes, members of the audience will then be allowed to ask questions to each debate team for 15 minutes, and finally each team will give their closing argument for a total of five minutes. Each team’s goal will be to win the debate, not necessarily to defend their personal stance on a topic. After the closing arguments, the moderator will poll the audience to determine a winning debate team.

AIC Committees: Emergency, Health & Safety, and Sustainable Conservation Practice

BOOTH 407 & 409

The Emergency, Health and Safety, and Sustainable Conservation Practice Committees are made of up AIC members to deal with long-term, ongoing organizational issues. They each have leadership structure and report back to the AIC Board through a board liaison.

The Emergency committee is charged to promote awareness and increase knowledge of the AIC membership in the areas of emergency preparedness, response and recovery for cultural heritage.

The Health and Safety committee’s board-approved charge is to provide educational and technical information through lectures, workshops, displays, as well as electronic and print media, and to address health and safety issues of concern to the AIC membership.

The Committee on Sustainable Conservation Practice’s charge is to provide resources for AIC members and other caretakers of cultural heritage regarding environmentally sustainable approaches to preventive care and other aspects of conservation practice. They define research topics and suggest working groups as needed to explore sustainable conservation practices and new technologies.

The Northern States Conservation Center emphasizes practical solutions to common collection care problems. We believe conservation treatment is part of a process that preserves our cultural heritage. Without well-trained institutional caretakers, environmental controls, and monitoring systems that alert staff to potentially damaging situations, conservation treatment is a waste of precious funds.

We offer training, consultation on museum expansion and new construction, support in grant writing and editing, and regular updates on developments in collection care. Additionally we offer skilled conservation treatment to stabilize and repair damaged artifacts of all types: three-dimensional objects, works of art on paper, books, paintings, sculpture, furniture and photographs. We use a process called phased conservation to assess the current environment, devise a plan of action to address problem areas, survey specific collection objects, and develop and perform treatment as needed. The results benefit the entire collection.

Give Originals a Future

Microfilming and digitization play an important role in the Information Age, making information quickly accessible. However, for valuable bibliographic copies or original documents that must be archived, mass deacidification is an indispensable and inexpensive part of an integrated preservation concept.

Trust in more than 10 years of paper deacidification experience and more than 1,000 tons of efficiently and sustainably treated documents. With the papersave swiss process, we provide quality, experience and security for the preservation of the original and take responsibility for historical accounts on paper.

Whether yesterday, today or tomorrow: whenever history is written, paper is there. We look forward to helping you preserve history and give your originals a future.
